No section of the country under the broad canopy of heaven is more eminently adapted to the cheap, easy and successful cultivation of the grape than middle, eastern and southern North Carolina, the land requiring little or no drainage. The stranger traveling through our State on the country roads cannot fail to observe the luxuriant growth of our wild native grape, climbing the tallest trees, loaded with fruit, early and late. The muscadine, or bullice, heavily loaded with fruit from the ground to the top of the giant oak. Nature tells us in plain and unmistakable language the grape is one of the crops for you to cultivate. The ladies can assist greatly in the cultivation of the grape by shortening the shoots above the fruit with a pair of scissors and remove the laterals, by clipping the bunches from the vine to be packed for market or conveyed to the wine press. This is a sure cold cash crop, large profits and quick returns with one-tenth of the labor required for cotton. The directions for planting fruit trees will answer for the grape by adding half gallon bone dust mixed well with the soil. Corn-field peas should be planted between the rows; this crop shades and enriches the land and pays all expenses of the grape until the vines are in full bearing. The distance to plant the vines vary according to the notion of the grower, say six feet by eight, two branches to the vine. With grapes at ten cents per pound you can draw your own conclusions. point with pride to the far-famed Tokay Vineyard, near Fayetteville. millions of mineral wealth. The east is the Eden of North Carolina, redolent with the queen of flowers; the gordenia or cape jasmine and magnolia grandifloria, and add to these the beautiful trees, vines and flowers of our native wilds. Here a man may eat of the pomgranate, and sit under his own vine and fig tree with no one to make him afraid. The North Carolinian, when exiled from home, may well exclaim:

"Take me home to the place where I first saw the light, To the sweet sunny South take me home, Where the mocking bird sang me to rest every Oh, why was I tempted to roam?"

W. H. HAMILTON. The Curculio.

The curculio or weevil is a very numerous species and may be found all over the world. This statement is simply the confirmation of scientific research of what the farmers have long since known. They devour vegetable food, even as larvæ, and although slow, easily frightened, and without mode of defence, have long succeeded in baffling the efforts of man to FALL AND WINTER SEASON, 1888. be rid of them. Most of them are dull and uniform in color, although some are of dazzling beauty and beautiful as gems. The larvæ are white, soft, without feet, having convex rings. Their heads are hard and jaws horny. It would be intensely interesting if the annoyance of the horrid insects could be forgotten, to watch the beautiful manner in which the parent deposits the eggs out of reach of all possible harm, where all that is necessary for the early sustenance of the insects as well as its preservation may be secured. The number of species is so great that no kind of fruit or grain escapes their favor; grapes, pears, peacher, plums, apples, palm trees, pine trees, firs, etc., bazel nuts, sugar cane, turnips, and so on are all attacked, so that the farmer might well give up the fight in despair. When the flowers fall from the plum and apricot, the curculio begins by making a hole in the fruit and inserting its egg. The larvæ eats and grows and the truit is destroyed.

The best way to dispose of them, unless possibly crushing between thumb and finger is excepted, on the tree, is to jar them off the tree on a sheet below and then dispatch them speedily. It is necessary to strike the tree a heavy quick blow. Some favor padding a mallet so as not to injure the bark, others decide that an inserted iron bolt struck heavily with a hammer is far more effectual. The sheet should be stretched a sufficient distance above the ground to keep it from becoming wet and soiled. The process of jarring should be begun early and frequently repeated. At first a dozen or fifteen insects will be thrown off, and finally the number will decrease to one or two and to none. In this way alone can the beautiful fruit of the plum be saved from the devastating ravages of the curculio .- Massachusetts Ploughman.

Household Recipes.

Snowflake Cakes .- Half a cup each butter and lard, two cupe powdered sugar, one cup milk, whites of five eggs and three cups flour. Flavor with vanilla and bake in small tins.

FRITTERS.-Four eggs well beaten, one part of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, half-teaspoon of salt, milk enough to make a batter, fry in hot lard, sprinkle with sugar or eat with syrup.

GINGER SNAPS .- Half a gallon of motablespoonfuls of soda; flour to make stiff. Roll thin and bake quickly.

This will prevent the hens from standing on the edge of the nest and reaching down to the eggs after laying them, and they will be unable to get at them while they are in the nest.

Hints on Shoeing.

Do not let horses' shoes remain over three to six weeks, dependent on the amount of use and the toughness and growth of the hoofs. Each time after taking off the shoes, if the road permits, let him go barefoot as long as no injury follows, as this expands the hoofs and keeps them in more perfect condition. Some horses can be used barefoot, off pavements, for months, or the whole year round, and work better than if shod. Never allow the frog of the foot to be cut asses, one pound of sugar, one pint of out or trimmed, unless somewhat ragged, melted lard, one tablespoon each of ex- and then only a very little, as it acts as a tract of ginger, cinnamon and cloves, two cushion to the foot and lessens or even prevents braising when striking a stone or other hard substance. See that the hoot is not pared beyond absolute necessity, and that the shoe is properly fitted to it, and not the hoof to the shoe. Do est shoes compatible with the condition of the roads and the work required of the horse. - American Agriculturist.
